

THREE WERE SAVED. NO BOND ISSUE NOW.

Capt. Balcom and Two Seamen Rescued by the Creole Prince.	This Statement Positively Made on Good Authority.

The steamship Creole Prince, Capt. (By Associated Press) which arrived this morning from WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The passage, Oct. 15, at N. S., in latitude 25.07 longitude 66.42, she sighted the water-logged schooner Coronet, of Lunenburg, N. S., Cap. Balcom, bound from Halifax, N. S., for Port Spain with a cargo of fish and potatoes.

Haddon and Peter Carlson. The other members of the crew Mate Freeman, Bosun, Peter Peterson and a sailor, name down on her head. She was 19 years of age, and was in the position she held with the company for 10 years. She had a water-tight cabin skylight and companion-way.

Oct. 15, the Coronet experienced a terrible storm from the southwest and was holed in the beam end.

After cutting away the masts, the vessel righted, but she was then a complete wreck, at the mercy of wind and waves.

Capt. Balcom and his two surviving seamen lashed themselves on the poop-deck, and were in an exhausted condition, being badly bruised and without food or clothing. After being taken on board the tug, they were given a change of clothing and kindly taken care of until they reached Trinidad, where Capt. Balcom remained.

The seamen, Haddon and Carlson, returned to this port on the Creole Prince.

On the 20th inst. the master of schooner "W. J. Bond" was in the harbor.

A subordinate official of the Treasury Department, in speaking of the matter, said that these reports were put in circulation by a certain class of Wall street brokers for the sole purpose of influencing the market, while others gave them circulation in the hope of forcing an issue.

It can be stated with the utmost positiveness that there are no preparations being made for a raid at the Treasury by another bond issue.

STORM HAS GONE TO CANADA.

New York Examiner and Will Have Clear Weather.

The storm that was expected here today has switched off into Canada, and Forecaster Dunn therefore predicts clear and colder weather. There may, however, be a slight flurry of rain or snow here this evening, but the indications are that to-morrow will be clear.

There was a heavy rain early this morning, accompanied by sharp lightning, but the clouds cleared away to warmer weather being drawn northward.

The chief topic of discussion in financial circles to-day was the reported intention of the Administration to issue a new Government loan, as foreshadowed by "The Evening World" some days ago.

It is stated that a close friend of President Cleveland recently interviewed officials of leading banks and prominent financiers, and that he has obtained their opinions as to the way a new loan would be received, and that he was able to make a favorable report to the President.

Secretary of the Treasury Jordan went to York, Michigan and the New England States, and the thermometer at Duluth, for the month, where rain fell. West of the Alleghenies it was cooler, and in Northern Minnesota the thermometer fell to zero.

Weather Forecast.

The weather forecast for the thirties hours ending at 5 P. M. to-morrow is as follows: Generally fair, with fog along the coast to-day; possibly light rain or snow during to-night, followed by fair on Sunday and much cooler weather on Monday.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature at Duluth during the month, as indicated by the thermometer at Perry's Pharmacy:

3 A. M. -38.6 A. M. -39.9 A. M. -39.12 M. -43

Lake Steamer Overdue.

For twice that amount. It is intimated that if an issue is decided upon, it will be for the purpose of enabling the gold to be sold at figures which will bring them down to a 3 per cent. basis.

The great plan of the money market, the defeat of the Populists would make such a loan go, and as they would be unable to forgive the loan, they would have to raise the gold reserve to the old $100,000,000 mark.

Foreign bankers, and to the belief that the gold reserve would be subscribed freely.

Mr. S. J. Sawyer & Co., who have asked whether he had heard anything to confirm the report of a bond issue said:

"Mr. Cleveland always does the right thing at the right time, without fear of the season is blowing over this shore. The P. & F. M. steamer No. 2 is overdue here. A telegram had been received that she would arrive yesterday afternoon. There has been no word heard of her since. No boat could enter this harbor with the sea now in running.

The Algonquin Towed In.

The Clyde line steamship Algonquin arrived in port this morning, having in tow the Croatan, of the same line. It was towed to the office of the harbor master, where it was taken in tow by the tug No. 3, as the Croatan was crossing the bar. Bound out of Wilmington, Del., she sustained an accident to her port propeller.

Tale of a Rubber Doll.

The train was just about to start, says the reporter, when a woman came on board.

"How nice it is for a young man to be so domesticated," remarked the old lady, "what a little darling it is, too—so quiet."

"Ah! ha—ha—ha!" remarked the young gentleman, "I shall still talk."

"Shut up," said the young gentleman, roughly pinching it.

"Ha-ha-ha-ha!" said the baby.

The young man gave it a violent shake. The ladies assumed a threatening expression.

"I shall do what I like," said the young man, and he began to unbuckle his robe, he began to wiggle it round and round, so that its head came in contact with the floor, and he began to utter the shrieking becoming terrific.

"Get up and pushed him away from the door, and he went to my window, and he began to summon the guard."

"Look here, sir," he said, "you may call the guard if you like, but recollect that this baby is mine; therefore I have

The Bishop Was Drunk.

It seems that "dramatic agencies" were not unknown in the time of David Garrick. A newly published book relating to one Stone, who, in those days used to furnish the theatrical managers with recruits for the small parts, is an entertaining reading, says an exchange. It is a book by a certain Mr. Garrick with a fellow to play to provide the small parts in the plays of William of Winchester in "Henry IV." On the turn up at Drury Lane, the man did not like the part, and the manager, in the note came instead: "Sir, the Bishop of Winchester is to play the part."

DON'T FOLD YOUR ARMS.

One careful mother teaches her children how to fold their arms across their chests. She tells them they must study to contract what should, on the contrary, have everything done to relax it. So she says, "Don't fold your arms." This is the basis of one of this common practice who insists that the growing children shall, in standing, hold their arms straight out in front behind the back, alleging that as much good will come from this habit as harm from the other.

due to irregularities in the digestive tract, call and let us explain our New Treatment. Dr. J. C. KELLY, 609 N. 7TH ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Only a few weeks ago, a lecturer, at a big meeting gave utterance to the following words: "I understand that some of the future we can see are printed in the prints of an unseen hand."

The speaker was talking about the bubblers, and leaves the ashes in his hands.

"Some of the regulations of the Woburn Boston Bridge Company reads: 'And said proprietors shall meet annually at the house of Mr. John G. June, provided the same does not fall on a Sunday.'

An orator at one of the Universal Brotherhoods once held up the palm of merit which he declared whether it is roaming the deserts and climbing the forests of Canada will not turn its horns nor retire in its shell.
